

16th Annual Great Balls of Fire 9-Ball Billiards Challenge

February 5 and 6, 2010

Wynkoop Brewery in Downtown Denver

Benefiting UCP Colorado's Kyle E. Fisher Memorial Fund

GOODNESS ...

The Great Balls of Fire 9-Ball Billiards Challenge is all about the goodness in people who want to make a difference in the lives of children and their families. Hosted by the Colorado Professional Firefighters, Denver Firefighters Local 858 and Wynkoop Brewing Company, this very special event is much more than a pool tournament. It is a benefit for United Cerebral Palsy Colorado's Kyle E. Fisher Memorial Fund. Parents, Brian & Kelli Fisher, set up the memorial fund in honor of their son, Kyle, who was born with Cerebral Palsy. Proceeds from this uplifting event help UCP Colorado provide scholarships for therapy and early education for children who otherwise would not receive these services. It is a fitting tribute and meaningful way to share with others the spirit, courage and inspirational joy for life and learning that Kyle embraced so strongly.

GRACIOUS...

What makes a truly remarkable and successful event? Simply put, the graciousness of our sponsors and contributors who make it all happen! At the Great Balls of Fire 9-Ball Billiards Challenge, everyone's a winner! Your participation is the start of a winning opportunity that will not only help children, but also provide tremendous exposure for your company and a great chance to meet new friends, clients and future customers! Eighty-seven cents of every dollar goes directly into the Kyle E. Fisher Memorial Fund.

GREAT BALLS OF FIRE!

Sound the alarm! Fun is guaranteed to break out when you attend the Great Balls of Fire 9-Ball Billiards Challenge. This two day event begins with a Friday night warm-up party, location to be announced. Bring the whole family and experience an evening filled with plenty of good food, fun and entertainment. New venue and new entertainment will make for a lively evening of fun and amusement for everyone.

On Saturday, amateur players and celebrities team up at Wynkoop Brewing Company for an afternoon of friendly competition at the pool tables. The day's event will feature sports celebrities, Denver Bronco cheerleaders, great food, a silent auction and a grand prize for the winning team. Please join us at The Great Balls of Fire Billiards Challenge—the hottest game in town!

Child Care for All Children, All Needs

Creative Options Readies Each Child for Kindergarten

MISSY OLLER KNEW HER CHILD-CARE CENTER was an ideal setting for kids with special needs. What she didn't know was that soon her own child would have special needs.

"It's the perfect melting pot," says Oller. "If you want a real-world perspective for your kids, you'll find it here."

Acceptance of all children, regardless of any physical or mental challenge, is the driving force behind Creative Options Centers for Early Education, a division of Cerebral Palsy (CP) of Colorado. Creative Options has five sites in the Denver metro area that accept children from birth to 5 years old. Some 700 families have children enrolled in the centers.

The children follow a detailed curriculum that prepares them for kindergarten. In addition, Creative Options gives each child vision, hearing and developmental screenings within 45 days of his or her enrollment. As well-child and dental checkups are done, results go into the child's file and into the Creative Options tracking database. Each classroom has a book for staff use that lists any child with a history of health concerns or a special diet. As children arrive daily and throughout the day, the staff keeps a watchful eye on their health. Nurses are on staff for concerns or emergencies. The philosophy: A healthy child is better prepared to learn.

“Identifying a child’s health, whether the child is in good health or has challenges, really removes the barriers to learning,” says Judith Ham, executive director of CP of Colorado.

The center’s focus on health proved pivotal for Oller’s son, Riley. The boy began going to a Creative Options facility down the hall from his mom’s office when he was just 6 weeks old. At 4 months, he developed hives. Missy, a parent educator with CP of Colorado, thought it was just heat rash, but her son’s child-care providers suggested Riley see the center’s staff nurse. After her examination, the nurse sent Riley for allergy tests. Dozens of pinpricks later, he was found to be allergic to dairy, eggs, peanuts and shellfish.

As Oller started making adjustments to the family’s diet, Riley’s child-care workers prepared to manage his diet in their classroom. They posted “peanut-free” signs everywhere and made him special snacks without eggs or dairy products.

Providing all of a child’s meals during the day sets Creative Options apart from other centers. Creative Options centers also offer health and dental screenings for all children. It doesn’t matter if a child is part of the Head Start program or has serious developmental disabilities or is paying full price (about $12,000 a year).

“It’s unheard of,” says Oller, whose 18-month-old daughter Karris also attends the center. “I don’t know of another program doing dental screenings in Denver. They initiate the visit when they’re a year old so it’s not so scary when they’re older.”

The majority of children enrolled with Creative Options qualify for Head Start or Early Head Start programs, which means their families are living below the federal poverty line. Federal poverty guidelines vary by family size and place of residence. For the 48 contiguous states, a family of four making less than $20,650 yearly is considered to be living in poverty. For a single person, the amount is $10,210.

screenings with top-notch early education means these children are ready to learn in a traditional classroom, says Ham.

“We provide a totally comprehensive program – including family support, education, quality child care, and health and development services – to every family, whatever financial situation they’re in,” says

Ham. “We include children of all abilities in the same environment so they learn best from each other.”

In Riley’s class, one child needs a feeding tube while another relies on a wheelchair. Because he knows children who come from different backgrounds with various social and emotional challenges, Riley is accepting of the differences in children, Oller says.

“It becomes part of the norm. Kids understand ‘that’s just the way he is’ without there being a glaring spotlight. The kids see how one another adapts,” she explains. “It helps the parents, too. ... When we all get together for class events, the kids lead the way. They are friends with everybody and the parents ultimately meet each other on that common ground.”

Operated by CP of Colorado, Creative Options Centers for Early Education was awarded a three-year grant from The Colorado Health Foundation to help reduce enrollment in special education services; improve access to immunizations; and provide health assessments, physicals, developmental screenings, dental care and health education to improve health outcomes for children and their families.
